

(Madison) student newspaper, Bob got a firsthand view of history on a summer trip to Europe in 1963. After embracing the brazen courage of youth to request press credentials from Press Secretary Pierre Salinger, he got to stand 20 feet behind John F. Kennedy as the President declared to Germany and the world “Ich bin ein Berliner,” no doubt sparking a lifelong passion for Democratic politics.

A world traveler, Bob adores spending time in Rome, Italy—his second favorite city behind Portland. On their first trip to the city back in 1983, Bob's wife Barre became so ill, she had to undergo emergency surgery. Spending time in that Roman hospital, surrounded by the constant traffic of generous and caring visitors, the two fell in love with the city and the Italian people, wanting to spend as much time there as they could.

A self-described “frustrated architect,” Bob has been involved in renovating and restoring a number of historic buildings around Portland, including the former Portland police headquarters that was originally built in 1912 and which is where the law firm he founded more than 40 years ago, Stoll Berne, can be found.

It is through that firm that Bob has worked tirelessly, over the course of his long and distinguished legal career, to help others. He has tried over 150 cases—both jury and nonjury cases—in State and Federal courts that cover nearly the entire gamut of criminal and civil law.

But the majority of Bob's cases were focused on large complex financial litigation like securities, antitrust, and class actions in which he fought time and again on behalf of small investors and the less fortunate. All you have to do is look at the class-action suit against Exxon Mobile Corp after the 1989 grounding of the Exxon Valdez supertanker in Alaska's Prince William Sound that resulted in an 11-million-gallon oil spill. Bob led the Oregon State trial team and served on the committee that organized suits filed by more than 32,000 plaintiffs like small business and fisherman effected by the spill.

Bob also stood up for residents of the Fairview Hospital and Training Center when the hospital ignored a statute to continue institutionalizing patients past the age of 18 without reason. He also took up the case of State hospital patients who were left with no financial resources upon release, after the State laid claim to all their Social Security benefits. A former associate justice of Oregon's State supreme court once described Bob in a news article as “a well-grounded, common-sensical legal expert, to the point where people as high up in our system as the governor seek him out for personal counsel on complicated legal issues and political matters.”

And, as the long-time vice chair of Oregon's Democratic Party who got his start in politics running Lyndon Johnson's 1964 Presidential campaign in the State, Bob has indeed been an incredible source of political counsel and leadership to so many. Among his many achievements on behalf of the Democratic Party is launch of the informal Oregon Progressives group that transformed Oregon politics by building out civic engagement infrastructure like robust voter files and supported new organizations that brought stakeholders together around a shared agenda, especially on things like ballot measures.

But Bob's contributions to our State and to our country have gone far beyond his legal career and his political work. A strong believer in giving back to the community, Bob has regularly provided legal services to poor and minority communities, helped mentor “at risk” children, and served on the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau's first Consumer Advisory Board, where he championed ordinary Americans dealing with the powerful financial services industry.

On top of all that, he has also poured himself into the work of finding solutions to the homelessness crisis that has plagued our State, especially Portland. He has helped raise the financing for the construction of temporary transition shelters, like Harbor for Hope's River District Navigation Center under the Broadway Bridge, and inspired Portland State University's Homelessness Research and Action Collaborative to conduct a far more accurate and in-depth report on the scale of the homelessness crisis over a single year. Bob's most visible work in this area, though, is as a board member of Here Together, a coalition of service providers, business leaders, elected officials, leaders from communities of color and faith, and community advocates who all refuse to believe that homelessness in our community is an unsolvable problem. In this role, Bob helped craft and pass a regional supportive housing services ballot measure which targets the root causes of the problem through a dedicated funding source to pay for mental health, addiction and recovery services, case management, housing supports, and other proven solutions to the complex challenge of chronic homelessness.

The website for his firm, Stoll Berne, has this to say about Bob: “If our lives are only half as full as Robert's has been, we will all feel as though we have lived a life and a half.” As we look back on and celebrate Bob Stoll's 80th birthday, I cannot think of anything more fitting to describe this great legal and political son of the Beaver State. And I join all those who have paid tribute and have sent their affections and best wishes in honor of this special occasion.●
